

THE BEST PIZZA PLACES IN SAN DIEGO, RANKED

By ERIN JACKSON

New York and Chicago can have their childish shouting matches over who makes the best pizza. We'll just be down here enjoying some of the finest cheese and crust creations in the country (and we'll probably head to the beach afterward because, well, we can). From no-frills slice shops to tavern-style restaurants with top-notch tap lists for perfect pie pairings, take a look at the 10 best damn places to eat pizza in San Diego.

After Pizzeria Mozza shuttered, this prime piece of real estate in The Headquarters sat empty for far too long. Luckily, another pizza purveyor -- this time, a Las Vegas import -- moved into the space and fired up the ovens once more. The restaurant feels at home in the family-friendly plaza, with its approachable menu of New York-style pizza and signature entrees from chef JC Colón, whose impressive resume includes stints at Searsucker, Leroy's Kitchen & Lounge, and CUCINA urbana. When in doubt, go with the Big Apple, a classic pepperoni pizza that's as simple as it is delicious.
